

LIS-3353

From here, forward...

Hardware

Topping out?

Moore's Law?

What CAN'T we do?

What CAN'T we conceive of?

Software

Diversity of Development

- Environments (web, yikes)
- Licenses
- Purposes
- Compensation/Deliverables/Fun?

(what is the marginal cost of software?)

A little more economics

Economies of Scale

Capitalism (the system) v. Capitalism (the culture)

“Incentives?” lol

We Are All Here Now (from underground to mainstream)

Government?

Schools?

Tech Companies?

Non-Tech Companies?

Everybody in between and otherwise?

So many good things...

We can talk to everybody.

We can record everything.

We can make anything.

Big (specific) Idea - Freedombox

A small, cheap Linux box with a hard drive that you keep at your house, connected to the internet.

Aka . . . Freedom instead of slavery.

Today

- Owncloud
- MPD
- Calibre
- Rsync
 - Etc

Tomorrow..

- Mesh Networking
- Secure, reliable, controllable social networking
- Free phone calls
- Your data = your home = your property

Who owns your data?

You will have to decide this, and then explain why to others.

Okay, what do I do?

- Turn off your notifications.
- Curate your content.
- Get you a Linux. (Raspberry Pi?)
- Holler at me
- Have fun!
- Save the world.

Turn off notifications?

Yep. All the ones you can.

Force asynchronous communication; respond to people (and corporations) on your time, not theirs.

Curate your content (by others)

You may not have a lot of choices – but you absolutely can choose what you watch and pay attention to.

Maintain a healthy diet of info, despite all the junk food out there.

Curate your content (by you)

If you care about it, get it in your hand. Your actual physical hand.

Buy a hard drive (or two!) and copy those pictures, movies, songs etc.

..similarly..

Get you a Linux!

Raspberry Pi?

Old Computer?

Current Computer?

Not because “bash and code and kernels”--
but because, it's the only one that is YOURS.

Holler at me!

jmarks@fsu.edu

or, if not particularly school oriented

jrm4@jrm4.com

(I'm thinking about this newsletter thing)

Finally

Go have fun.

(..and save the world!)
